Immortalized by science and friendship

It is now almost 35 years since the Brazilian Headache Society was founded (1978) and naturally several of its founders have passed away. Among these we should remember in particular Edgard Raffaelli Júnior, Wilson Farias da Silva and José Martônio Ferreira de Almeida, who are all deeply missed. Some depart prematurely, as in the recent case of Marco Antonio Minchola Robles. All of them became immortalized during our congresses, and we always remember them for their outstanding contributions to our specialty and fondly recall the festive moments shared with them between the formal sessions.

In this issue of Headache Medicine you will find the program of our XXVI Brazilian Headache Congress, which we are sure will be of great interest to all of you. In addition, you will be able to read the abstracts on the most recent developments in the field of Headache Medicine from different centers in Brazil.
